

Frankie Montalvo has spent her life without roots, moving from one foster home to another, never belonging anywhere. When she unexpectedly inherits a crumbling plantation house on the island of Vieques, Puerto Rico, she sees it as a chance to finally build a life of her own.

But the island has other plans.

Locals whisper that the property is cursed.

Girls have vanished there.

The jungle surrounding the estate hides secrets darker than superstition.

Determined to restore the plantation and open a bed-and-breakfast, Frankie refuses to be chased away by ghost stories. But when mysterious attacks, family secrets, and eerie warnings begin to surface, she realizes the danger surrounding her new home may be very real.

Detective Rico Lopez came back to Vieques to escape the nightmares of a mission gone wrong. Instead, he finds himself investigating a string of disappearances linked to a legend locals call el chupacabra. Every trail leads to the same place, an abandoned plantation and the beautiful, stubborn woman who now owns it.

Posing as a handyman to get close, Rico quickly discovers that Frankie may be more than just part of the mystery... she may be the next target.

As attraction ignites between them, secrets begin to unravel—about Frankie's family, the haunted land she now calls home, and a predator hiding behind the mask of paradise.

On this island, the truth is buried deep.
And some secrets are worth killing for.
