

Agent Tempest Geryon is having a hell of a week.

A murdered nereid on the Jersey Shore.
A police force that doesn't trust her kind.
And a case spiraling into something far more dangerous than a simple kill.

As a demigod investigator for the Genesis Bureau of Investigation, Tempest is used to dealing with monsters.
What she's not prepared for... is going home.
After ten years away, Tempest is summoned back to Oceanus, where her dying great-grandfather, King Phorcys, has left her with an impossible choice: claim a crown she never wanted... or watch her world fall into war.

Because Poseidon, King of Atlantis, has arrived with a demand. Marry his son, Triton—or face destruction.

Powerful. Alluring. Dangerous.

The sea prince's hypnotic love song pulls Tempest under with every breath, blurring the line between desire and deception. But when a series of brutal murders begins to point directly at Triton, Tempest must decide...

Is he her greatest ally...
or the monster she's hunting?

With time running out and a killer lurking beneath the surface, Tempest is caught between two worlds, one she's sworn to protect, and one she refuses to rule.

To save them both, she'll have to embrace the power she's spent her life running from.

Even if it drowns her.